

COOPERATION IDEA

for Fisheries Local Action Groups

Description of cooperation proposed

The transnational cooperation idea, 'wetland life', consists of bringing together areas with lagoons or lakes, deltas, estuaries, rivers etc. protected by either the Ramsar Treaty or NATURA 2000 directive with the aim of promoting the protected areas through activities that will form the basis of a quality tourism offer. Indicative examples of activities include: a) the development of a guide to document these areas, indicating their morphology and history, the overwintering species, the flora and fauna, the water quality, the problems faced etc., b) training a local guide on alternative tourism activities that take place in the involved areas, c) documenting the fisheries activities (in particular small-scale fisheries) present in such areas, the ways they are implemented and the fish species and other products produced.

We are looking for partners with experience and knowledge on the management and promotion of such areas, in terms of making them attractive and appealing to the public.
